OCTOBER 15, 1992

Yesterday, I went to the UK History Department to see my old professor, Dr. Robert Ireland.

He was not in, but another professor suggested I talk to Jeremy Popkin. I knocked on Professor Popkin's door and told him I was doing research on the Warren Report. He said he had no interest. I said I misunderstood, and thought he did.

He sighed, and said his father, Richard Popkin, had written a book called The Second Oswald. I asked him about getting a copy and he said to try the library, he'd rather not discuss the subject.

I believe the book was published in 1966. Apparently, something about the subject upset Jeremy Popkin so much he would not even take my business card. An interesting side light to my visit to UK.